THE BANKING HOUSE IN ART METAL

AN ILLUSTRATED ENCYCLOPEDIA OF BANK FURNISHINGS IN BRONZE AND STEEL

Foreword by JAMES WALLEN

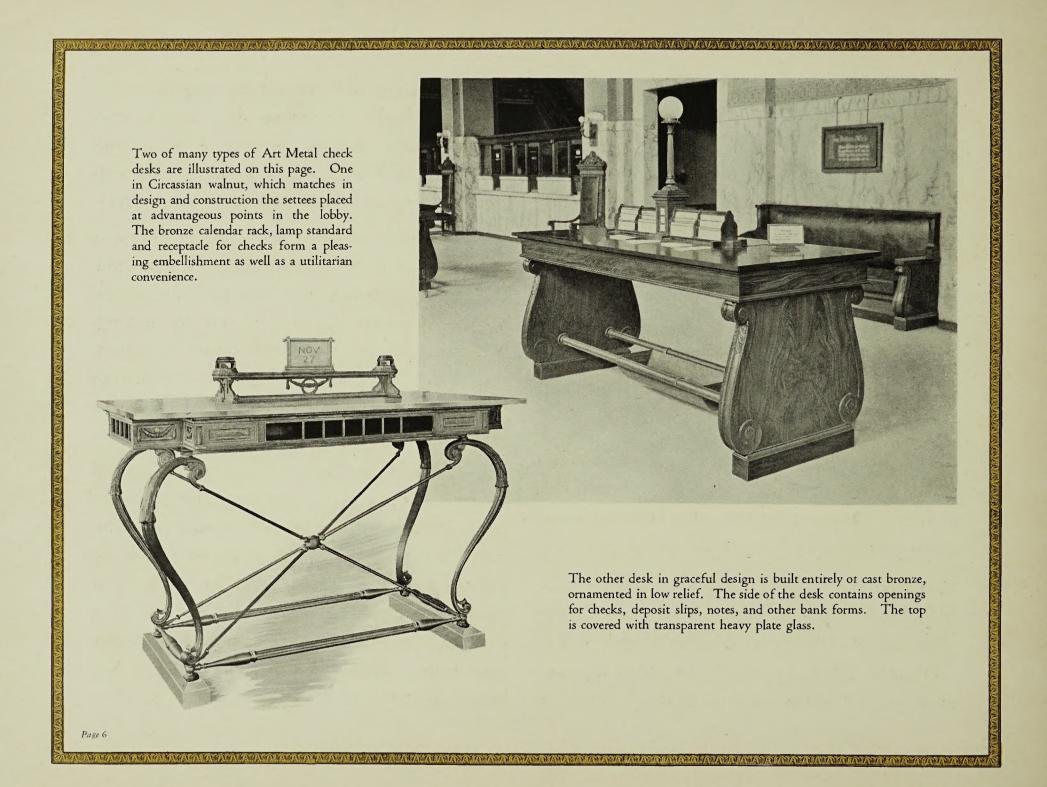

BANKS deal in credit. Credit is based on confidence." The foregoing few words, spoken by James S. Alexander, President of the National Bank of Commerce in New York, state the work-a-day philosophy of banking.

To have confidence in an institution you must be impressed with its solidity, sturdiness, and stability. The architecture of a banking house must express dignity, strength, and permanency. This fact prompts bankers to build with marble quarried from the eternal hills and to furnish their buildings with everlasting bronze and steel.

Bronze and steel symbol the high purpose and character of a banking institution. There is nothing transient, frivolous, or false in fine bronze or steel. These metals in combination express sincerity and purpose.

For a third of a century the Art Metal Construction Company has assisted bankers, public officials, and architects in the arrangement and decoration of banks and buildings of the commonwealth. Practically every city in America does its banking in one or more institutions for which the steel equipment and bronze grills and doorways were produced by the Art Metal Construction Company. One bank in every four has Art Metal furnishings. To prepare a list of Art Metal installations would be to compile a nearly complete directory of America's representative banks.

From Ghiberti to Art Metal

The progress in the craft of metal working may be best illustrated by harking back a few centuries in the history of bronze. Twenty-one years were devoted to the making of the bronze gates of the Baptistery in Florence by Lorenzo Ghiberti. The doors were put in place in April, 1424, nearly a quarter of a century after the commission was given to the master Ghiberti.

In a few short months the Art Metal Construction Company has furnished complete the bronze and steel equipment of large banks, from the massive entrance doors to the safe deposit grills, and the technical details have been given a finish rivalling that of Ghiberti's masterpiece.

The Art Metal Construction Company has combined the use of bronze and steel in bank buildings in so practical a manner as to standardize these two metals for interior bank architecture. The combination of bronze and steel is unapproachable by other materials from a standpoint of practical as well as esthetic requirements. From the highly decorative door to the steel omnibus every item of importance in a bank lends itself to a treatment in bronze or steel with greater facility and beauty than to other materials.

Art Metal quality is not entirely due to a deliberate attempt to outdistance competition. A deal of reverence and love for fine cabinet work in steel and bronze goes into its making. It has been an Art Metal tradition to cast, polish, and hand-chase bronze work as carefully as though each piece were to repose on a library table or to occupy an honored place in a museum.

Cellini tells, in his autobiography, of an old bronze founder who moaned with grief when the metal refused to run. Modern science has eliminated the sporting chances which were taken by the early Italian sculptors. Cellini related that it was necessary to throw the entire pewter dining service of his family into the furnace to dissolve the bronze. To-day thermometers, gauges, and laboratory tests determine the fusibility of metal, and perfect bronze is the daily experience at Jamestown.

The uniform quality of Art Metal bronze and steel is now recognized the world over. You will find it in the London Joint City and Midland Bank, the British Naval Mission to Greece, the great Nederlandsche Bank at Amsterdam, and other institutions of international fame.

Architectural individuality may be retained in Art Metal work, for be it remembered that Art Metal bronze and steel are individually prepared for each important contract, and that the work is finished with cutting tools, chisels, files, and gravers. Often the natural skin of the metal solidified in contact with the mold is preserved. Then again it is carved and chased, beaten, wrought, and embossed.

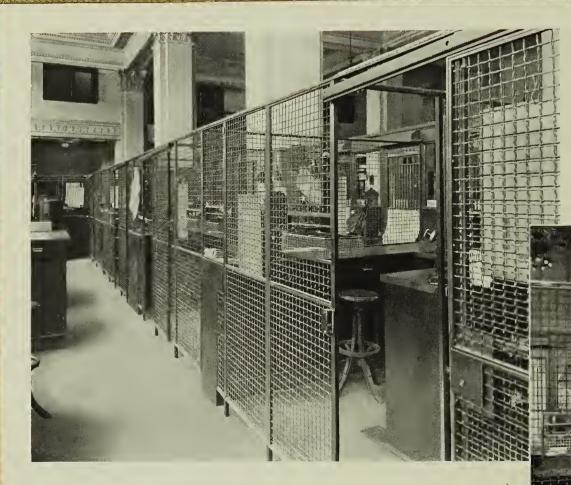

It is the good fortune of Art Metal to visualize in bronze and steel the designs of the most eminent architects. The interior of an Art Metal bank is remembered for its genuineness, dignity, and all-pervading refinement.

A Journey through an Art Metal Bank

A little journey through an Art Metal bank gives one the sense of grandeur and good taste that metal, rightly used, may impart. Here at the entrance are the great bronze doors. Though cast but a year or two ago, they have the mellow perfection that might have been cherished through the ages.

Harmonized with the classic Byzantine pattern is the insignia of the bank—the monogram or initials that have come by repetition to designate the institution to the passers-by. Then welcoming you through the foyer into the open exchange are a pair of gates, fretwork in metal, an architectural inspiration.

In the center of the banking floor are check desks of bronze in a design adapted from one of the major furniture periods. There is a point here to be observed. Often the exquisite lines

The mesh work in the cages illustrated is of substantial Art Metal construction, being of one quarter inch square crimped wire, securely tenoned to steel channel framework.

The sliding, gravity doors hang on McCabe hangers and are each provided with a positive catch which permits the door to be opened from the inside only. Intercommunicating hand openings and pivot telephone standards are provided for the convenience of the tellers. At the rear of the cages, baskets, subdivided for various departments, are placed so that the distribution of interdepartmental work may be handled without interruption.

of a design by the brothers Adam or Thomas Sheraton, conceived to be worked in precious woods, will assume a noble aspect in bronze. The check desks have provisions for ink-fonts, calendars, and lamps of regal grace.

To the right is the officers' reception room with desks of Art Metal, finished and toned to simulate with faithfulness the grain and burl of beautifully figured walnut. The texture of any wood may be represented in an Art Metal finish. In the directors' room is a massive council table, treated after the manner of a rare wood.

The steel receiving tellers' cages, extending along in the side of the bank, are made impressive by a façade of Art Metal bronze. And here, perhaps, Art Metal reaches its zenith of structural beauty. The austere proportions of a Doric design are maintained in screen and pilasters with consistency and effect. The discount department is uniform with the receiving tellers' cages in dignified grace.

Your passage to the safe deposit department is momentarily halted by an Art Metal gate, extending from the floor part way to the ceiling. Here is a protective measure made inoffensive by an almost lace-like treatment of bronze. In its beauty you forget that it effectually bars the intruder. Strength is given a mild and pleasant exterior—the silken glove of refinement over the iron fist of protection.

And back of all this bronze is steel—the Atlas of metals which bears the world's burdens on its mighty shoulders. In the various sections of this book you will find described the scores of practical items for the cages, work-rooms, and safe deposit departments, produced in steel by Art Metal, to make banking easier and more efficient. Art Metal has originated more such helpful devices than one could list here.

Leading to the directors' room is the Art Metal staircase winding around the elevators—the old-time grace conceding a place to the swift, upward transportation of a busy and impatient people. Arnold Bennett says that such American staircases often sustain comparison with those of the Paris Opera. And the elevators are enclosed with grills and doors of Art Metal so designed and constructed as to resist the unceasing wear, with an indifference to the flight of time.

The Logic of Art Metal

Under control, fire is man's best friend. Running rampant, fire is man's most fearful enemy. In many a disastrous experience Art Metal has proved its worth in resisting fire. In the aftermath of collapse, flood, and general havoc, documents, securities, and precious possessions entrusted to the care of Art Metal are preserved intact. Art Metal may always be salvaged. But more important than these facts is the cheering thought that Art Metal helps to prevent such catastrophes.

Art Metal also contributes to sanitation. It is unaffected by dust, vermin, and other agents of deterioration to which wood is always subject. Throughout this book are examples of protective measures against destruction and injury supplied by Art Metal, without which no banking institution can be considered truly modern.

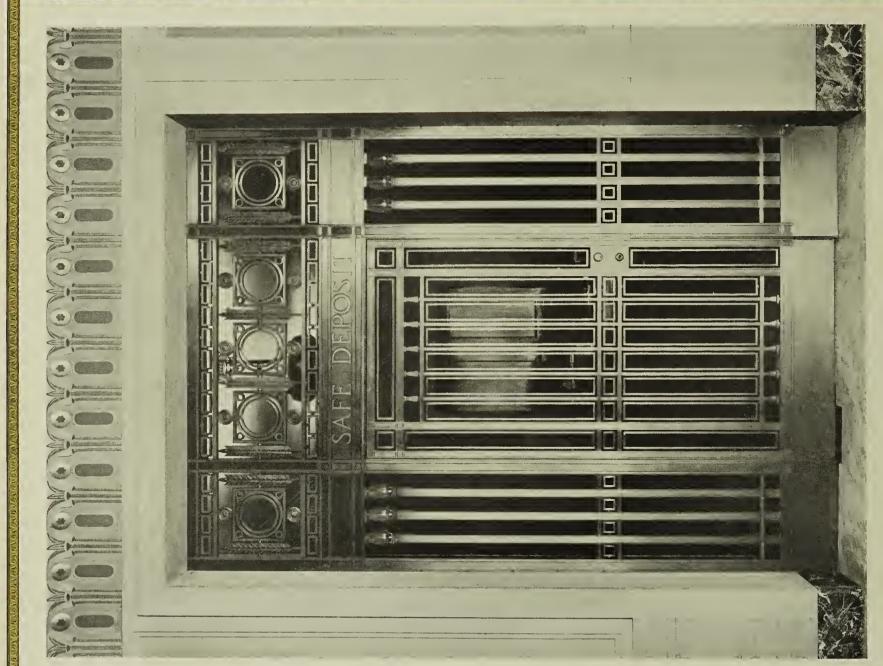

Rather than serving as a detailed and laborious catalog of Art Metal equipment, which by the way is supplied by the general catalog issued by the company, this book is an exhibit of some of the typical examples of banks plenished with Art Metal. We also consider it a forecast of what may be done. It is possible that your particular bank may furnish Art Metal with the opportunity for its greatest accomplishment. It is part of the Art Metal creed to believe that every contract is a passport to higher achievement. As you turn the pages of this book, remember that whatever of magnificence and worth you may see, can be duplicated or surpassed in the banking house in which you are interested.

This shows detail of wicket, serving the savings department. On the wicket is a glass name plate. The ornamentation is etched on the bronze. The marble is Pavanazzo.

Worked with amazing skill into the design of this Art Metal bronze screen are copies in the large of the present United States coins. Back of the screen is a complete Art Metal equipment. Steel money trucks and aluminum currency boxes were included in this work for the Federal Reserve Bank at Boston.

Art Metal Standardized Bank Designs

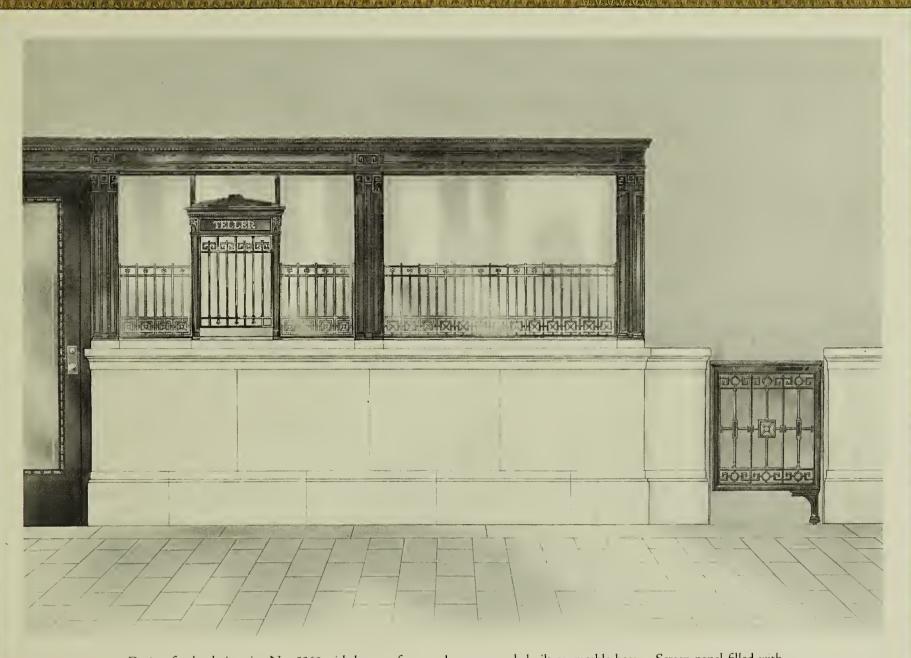

Out of the wealth of a long and mature experience in the furnishing of banks, we have come to recognize certain fundamental features which must be observed. This knowledge has been concentrated into a number of effective designs suitable to small and branch banks.

These patterns are based on sound architectural designs, planned for workability and all-round satisfaction as well as beauty. You will find suggestive descriptions under each of the designs.

Design for bank interior No. 2260 with bronze front and screen panels built on marble base. Screen panel filled with clear plate glass with acid etched border, set in frames of solid bronze. An unusual design.

Design No. 2262. Screen panels of plate glass, with acid etched borders set in bronze frames. Cast bronze sign plates to be fixed above wickets. The bronze protection grill is a special Art Metal arrangement.

Design No. 2250, of bronze with marble base. A variation in design from 2263, with an ornamental cast bronze brake over each pilaster and a neat cornice mould of cold rolled bronze on the front.

No. 2244 bank design, of ornamental bronze with marble base. Ornamental rosette placed in sunken panel of frieze over each pilaster adds interest to this design. Cast brass or bronze sign plates to be fixed between pilasters above wickets.

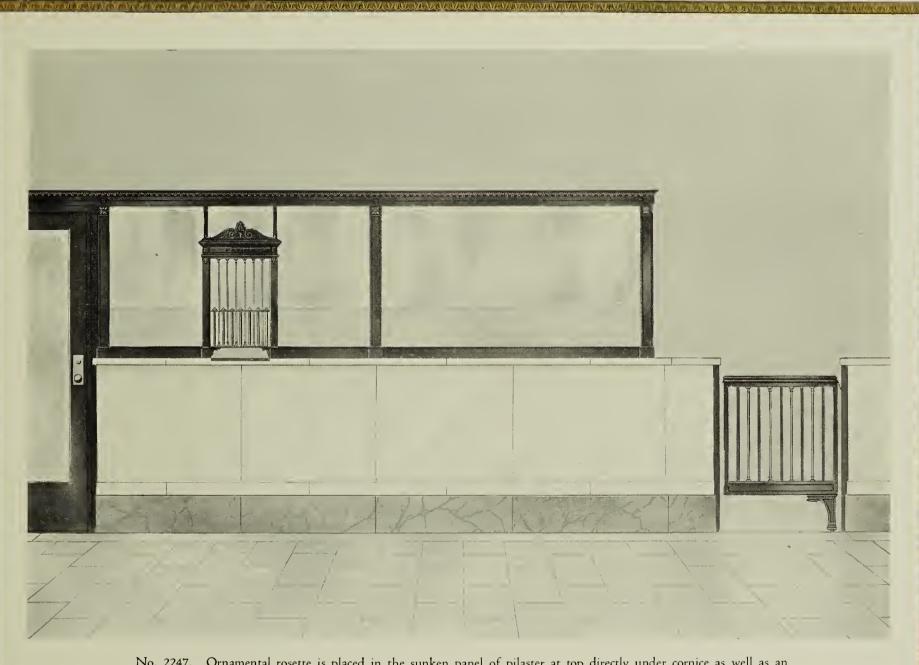

Design 2259, marble screen with Art Metal bronze wickets, gate, door, and glass frames. Screen panel filled with clear plate glass, set in bronze frame. A very interesting arrangement.

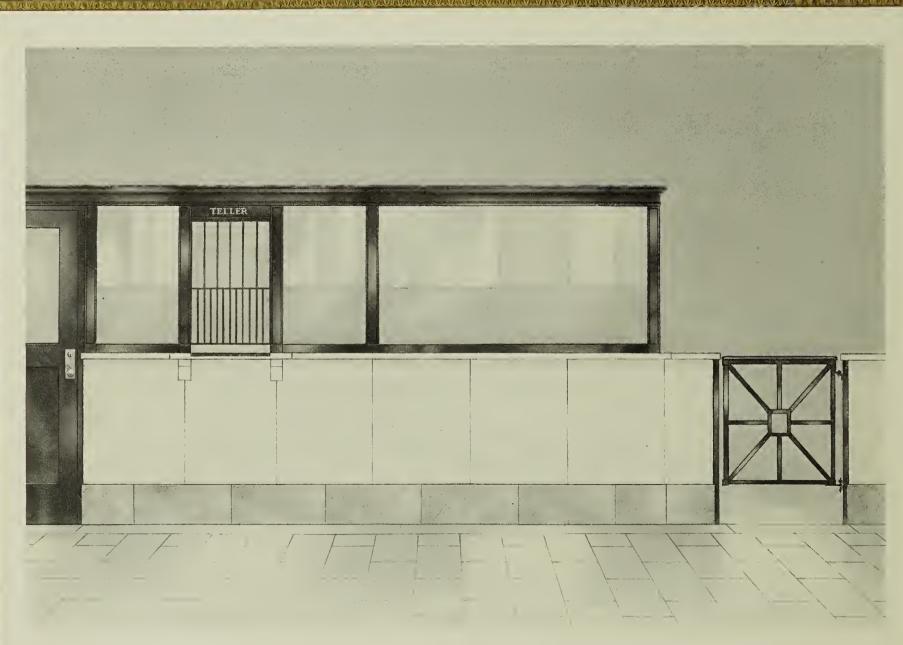

No. 2265, ornamental bronze with marble base. Pilasters extend to top of cornice in this interesting design and are capped with an ornament of cast bronze. Wicket openings are cut through glass and inscriptions etched over openings.

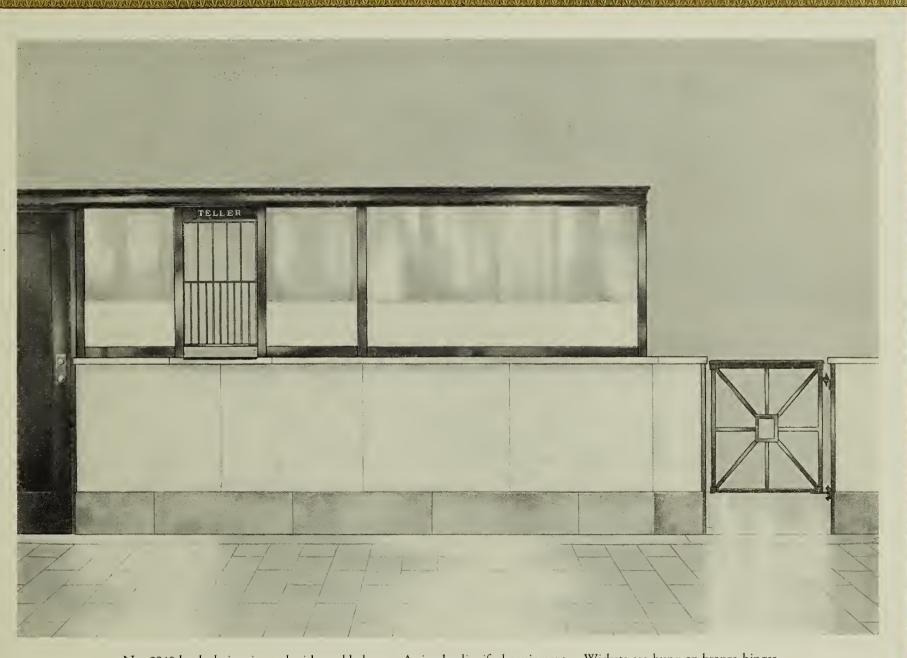

No. 2240 bank design, bronze with marble base. A plain and dignified motif with pilasters showing plain sunken panel. No decorative ornaments.

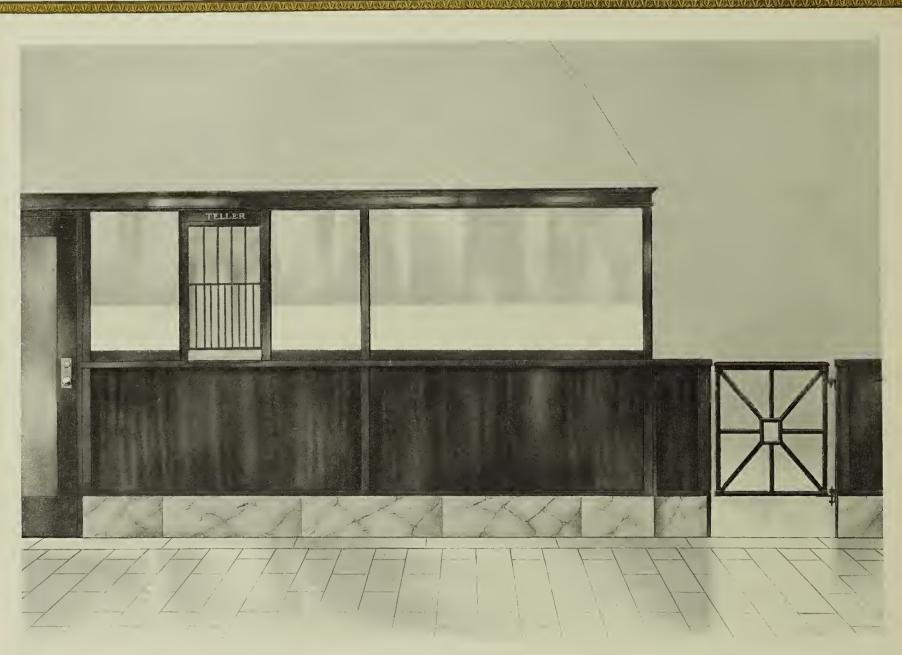

No. 2247. Ornamental rosette is placed in the sunken panel of pilaster at top directly under cornice as well as an ornamental mould of cast bronze run along the top of the cornice. Cast bronze sign plates are used over wickets.

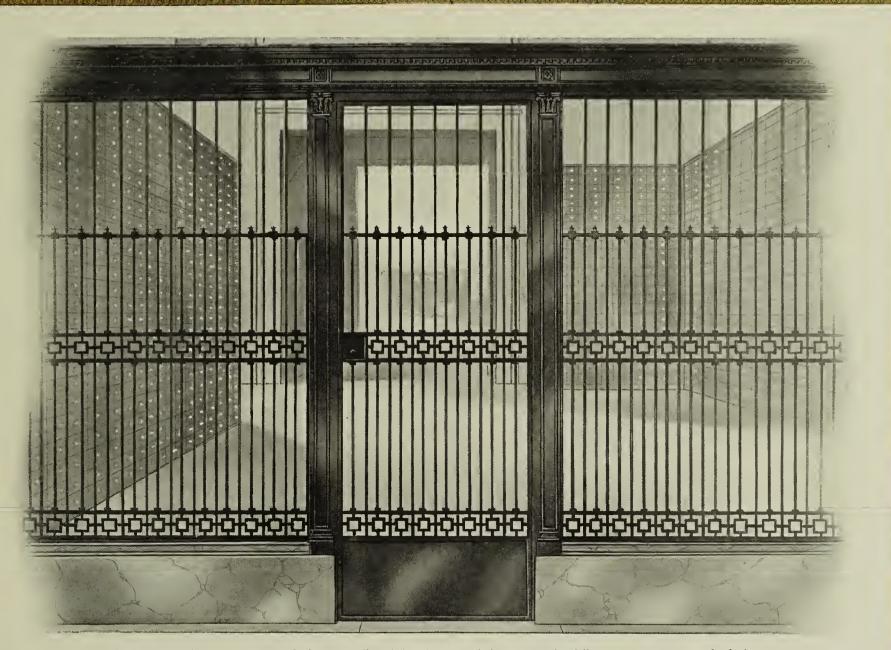

No. 2240-A bank design. Front of pilasters with plain sunken panels. Cornices of one-piece cold rolled moulding. Screen panel filled with clear plate glass, acid ground from counter up to fifty-eight inches from floor.

No. 2248 bank design, in steel with marble base. A simple, dignified equipment. Wickets are hung on bronze hinges and locked by spring lock concealed in pilaster. Steel signs with gilt letters are fixed between pilasters above wicket.

No. 2248-A bank design, in steel with marble base-board. This design permits of a natural wood finish and graining to match the furnishings of the bank.

This is a typical suggestion for safe deposit grills. This design and the one on the following page are typical of what is customarily used at the entrance of vaults. These can be made of either bronze or polished steel.

Another grill of fine properties and strength which has proved its value.

Art Metal Innovations

In the following section of this book you will find furniture for banks vastly superior to ordinary equipment. We have not allowed novelty to interfere with either practicability or quality. All Art Metal furnished is built of special analysis cabinet steel. The hardware is cast bronze, brush bronze, or statuary bronze finish. The locking mechanisms are simple but thoroughly effective.

We are always glad to supply further details on request. Art Metal quality has become a religion in our factories, respected by those who purchase our materials, our craftsmen, and our sales force.

Style 1940 Flat Top Double Pedestal Desk. For those executives who prefer a clear working space to the roll top. Sixty or sixty-six inches of flat surface.

Style 946 Art Metal Double Pedestal Steel Desk. A serviceable desk "stripped for action." Built most particularly for back of the cage use.

Style 1991-60-inch Double Pedestal Flat Top Desk Style 1992-55-inch Dcuble Pedestal Flat Top Desk Style 1929 Single Pedestal Typewriter Desk, with disappearing top. Provides a firm, silent bed at a convenient height for the typewriter when in use, a clear working space of 43 x 34 inches, and a steel, dustproof case for the machine when not in use.

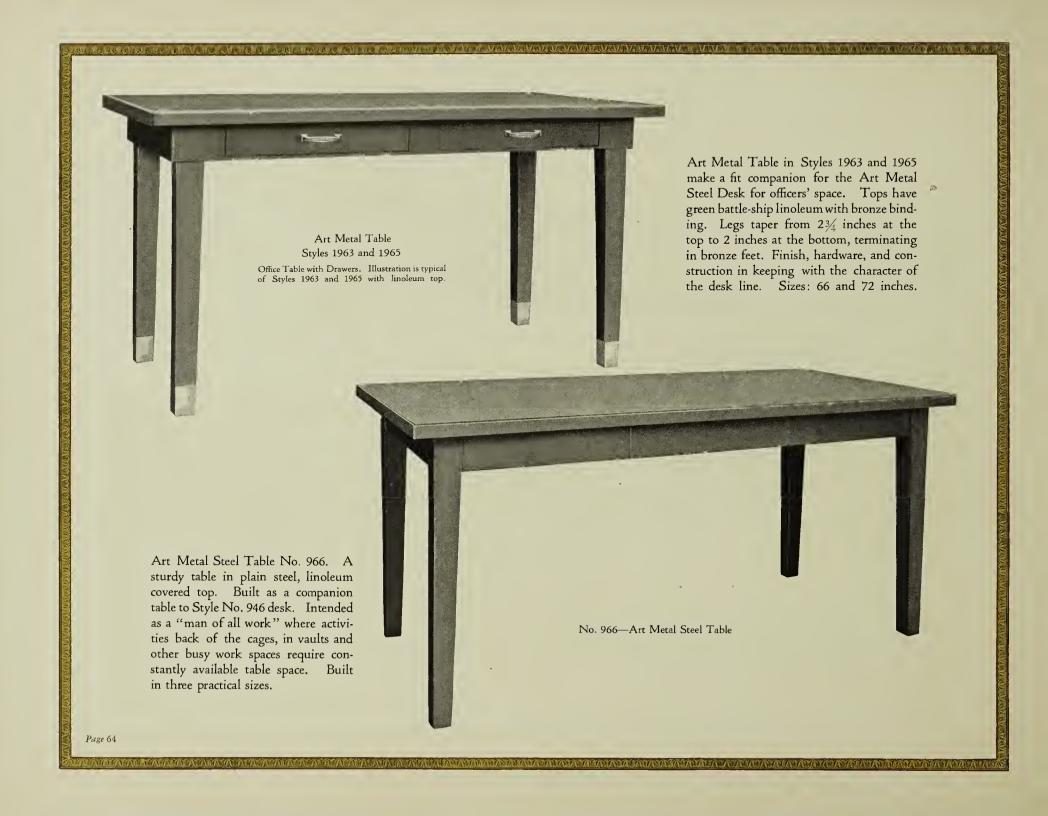

Style 1929-Single Pedestal Typewriter Desk

These desks meet the demand for a medium-priced steel desk. They are designed for the needs of the clerk, stenographer, and office employees generally.

An Art Metal Table in steel and bronze for the directors' room. Built to complete the furnishing of the bank in steel and bronze, this table represents the best thought and observations of Art Metal engineers and designers in planning a table that can take its rightful place in the directors' room of any institution where interiors anticipate the use of steel and bronze. The dimensions are 42×96 inches.

Made up of a top, Style 386; 2 card index drawers (8 × 5 cards) and a document file Style 320; 2 card index drawers (5 × 3 cards), Style 312; vertical letter file, Style 300; a lock cupboard, Style 360, and a Style 382 sanitary base.

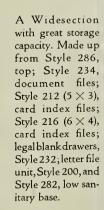

The famous Art Metal four-drawer letter file, Style 741. The most essential piece of office furniture next to a desk.

The file of the executive or of the small department must be versatile. This locked stack of Halfsections is one of hundreds of combinations. It is made up of a top, Style 386; 3 drawer document file, Style 335; 3 legal blank drawers, Style 333; 2 card index drawers (5 × 3 cards), Style 313; a reducing top, Style 2373; a vertical letter file, Style 2301, and a Style 2385 sanitary base.

An Art Metal Omnibus for the collection cage, with two currency drawers at the top, each with compartments. Four check files, four document drawers, and one individually locked cupboard with extra shelf. Equipped with patented automatic general lock.

A convenient Bus Arrangement from Art Metal Stock Units. Six deposit slip files, six check files, and two ledger file units provide the essential equipment needed in many places back of the cages.

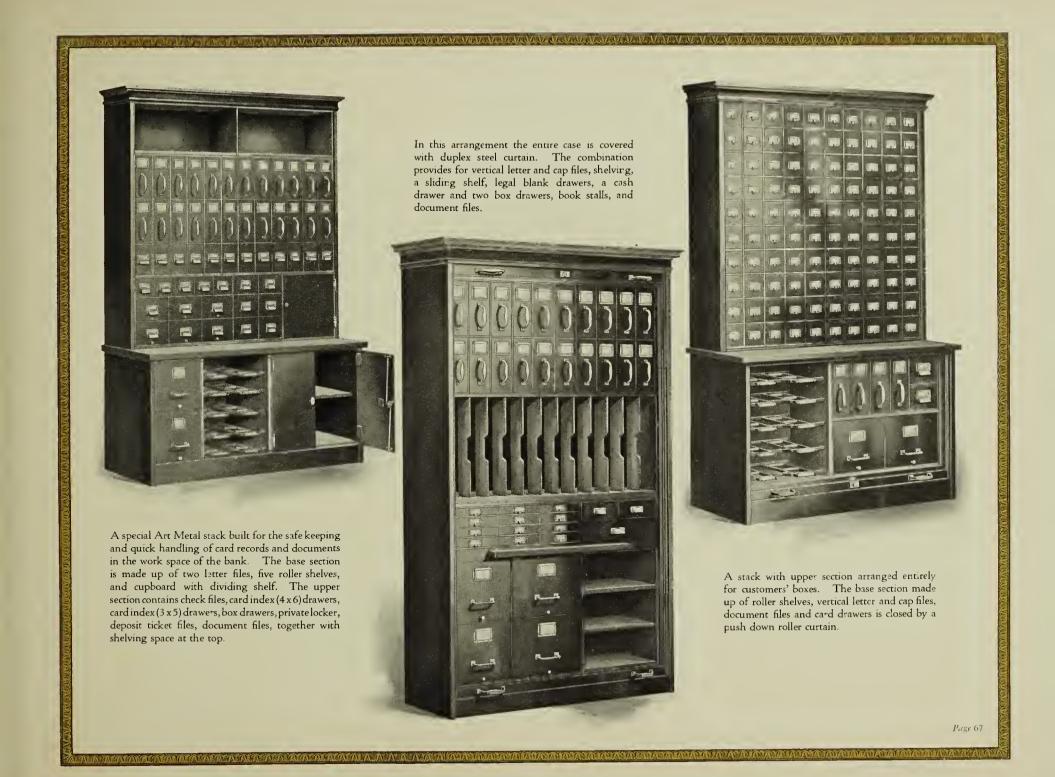

An Omnibus for the exchange cage, with top righthand drawer for currency and left-hand drawer for checks. Under the check drawer and to its right, two extra check drawers. Four small drawers and one large, shallow drawer are provided for blanks. A two-shelf opening is provided for ledgers and books.

A Teller's Bus with currency and check drawers, protected with roller curtain. The countersunk handle and curtain control save valuable inches of floor space in the cage. Two check files are provided in the right-hand drawer—an efficient variation.

An Omnibus for the note cage with six check files to contain the checks, notes, vouchers, etc., two box drawers for supplies and blank forms, and ample shelf room for books, ledgers, and binders.

Sectional Counter Filing Equipment

A typical Counter as arranged by Art Metal from the new "4700" sectional counter line. Counter height equipment is designed to provide a working top at a convenient height which covers essential filing equipment. Single units may also be used as desk-side files and in series they serve as office partitions.

Combinations and arrangements may be planned to fit any size space in the bank and to meet any special plans as to arrangement of working material.

The section illustrated is made up of Style 4727, detachable end; Style 4757, 7-drawer check file unit; Style 4703, 12-drawer deposit slip unit; Style 4707, knee space unit with cashier's drawer; Style 4705, roller shelf unit; Style 4704, lock cupboard; Style 4727, detachable end; Style 4708, gate section.

Style 81, double door, closed. Art Metal Safes have been designed to contribute not only to the safety of records, but to the dignity and character of the banking house as well.

An illustration typical of Style 80 Underwriters' Label Class "A" and Style 70 Underwriters' Label Class "B" Art Metal Safe. Nearly seven feet in height, it provides the filing and storage capacity of a small vault. The interior arrangement is suggestive. Hundreds of plans, making use of Art Metal stock units, are possible.

Styles 81 A-Label and 71 B-Label Art Metal double-door safes, in a medium size. The inside space is 53 inches high and 33 inches in width with a depth of 20 ¼ inches. The size allows for a great many combinations of interior arrangement aside from the one shown.

Styles 83 A-Label and 73 B-Label Safes. With castors removed is just the height of Art Metal sectional counter units, 42 inches. This safe is another Art Metal achievement in the conservation of work space. The interior equipment as shown is a typical selection, dozens of others being possible.

There are four sizes of Art Metal Safes. Styles 82 and 72, single door models corresponding in height to styles 81 and 71, are not illustrated.
